

Senior Business Advisory Specialist

A Day in the Life at McIntyre Dick

Your morning begins with a quick team check-in before you head into a client meeting where you'll work through strategic recommendations focused on ensuring their business success. By midday, you're fielding specific accounting questions from team members across a range of client businesses and using the opportunity to create clarity for them to produce their best work and providing on-the-job guidance that strengthens everyone's capabilities.

After lunch, you slip out to watch your kid's cross country, knowing you can make up the time later – it's this flexibility that helps our team thrive both professionally and personally. You then spend some time connecting with local professionals to build relationships that fuel both client and firm growth. Your day concludes by mentoring a junior advisor, building their confidence to tackle complex business challenges independently.
